Talking on the Job: The World of Corporate Speech

Pathology by Katie Schwartz. Book with kit. Setting the standard for how to establish and market a corporate speech pathology program. The corporate world is exciting, but unfamiliar for speech-language pathology. This unique publication serves as a practical guide to using your professional knowledge and clinical skills in this exciting new environment. It shows the demand for speech-language pathology outside of traditional medical and educational settings and explores the rewards of working in the corporate world. Inside you'll find practical business information, suggestions, and sample programs in areas of corporate speech pathology. Book is 150 pages.

The Sense Cues Kit™ is an assessment tool that helps determine which sense will most aptly cue a client to work on a specific behavior by testing all five. Once the dominant sense is established, the client can focus on using the cues every day until cues are no longer necessary. Our senses cue us all the time. Clients can use these sense cues as reminders by connecting the cue with a behavior. For example, a client could use the scent of hand lotion as a cue to concentrate on speaking more slowly.
